Junior Hockey Team Getting In Shape

L. Y. Brien Again Elected President
Team Loses Three Players from Last Season's Lineup

Holding their annual meeting in the sample room of the Imperial Hotel last Saturday evening, the Basano Junior Hockey Club elected a new slate of officers and made plans for the coming winter's sport. Officers for the 1933-34 season are: Hon. pres., H. O. Brien; Pres., L. Y. Brien; Vice pres., J. N. Conway; Sec. treas., T. Gannon; Executive Committee - J. A. Harris, L. Whitehorn, R. J. Maurer, M. R. Milroy, A. F. Piacenza.

The position of manager is not yet filled, but vice pres. J. N. Conway is acting manager for the time being.

This season the team will be without the services of three stars on last season's lineup—L. Leonard, R. Arlison, and P. Johnson. Leonard is now living at Chinoak, and Arlison is at Monmouth. Leonard was the team's leading goal-getter last season, and Arlison was rated one of the most valuable players on the lineup. Loss of these players will greatly weaken the club. The team still hopes to get Arlison back for this season. Perry Johnson, the Junior's star net custodian, has been away since September selling magazine subscriptions and will not be available this winter.

The team is practicing five nights a week, and the boys appear to be shaping up well. Friday night is reserved for hockey games. So far no games are scheduled.

The Junior's lineup will include G. Pike, Austin Ford, Stanley Wright, Irl Warren, Ted Stiles, Peter MacLean, Al Gador.

A. F. and A. M. Lodge Elects New Officers

The great American drama of the screen! Here is a story as simple and powerful as the growth of the world. A story of real people, human, simple, like the soil they came from. Lionel Barrymore and Marian Hopkins star in this great picture.

BOARD OF TRADE

Twenty-four members turned out to the board of trade meeting last Wednesday noon.

Pres. W. K. Webb reported that a new sign reading "Good Will" was being placed at the Crowfoot hill by the provincial dept. of public works following requests by the local board that greater safety measures be taken at this danger spot.

A letter was received from the secretary of the Basano Inspectorate school festival advising that the festival would definitely be held at Strathmore in 1934, but consideration may be given to Basano and Gleichen in future years and possibly these towns would be chosen for holding the festival.

In reply to a complaint regarding water supply at the swimming pool last summer, a lengthy letter from Town Engineer P. A. Mead was read. Mr. Mead explained in his letter the difficulties of supplying water, and voiced the opinion that the town was not to blame for the troubles encountered at the swimming pool. A letter from the town stated that next summer the pool would be supplied with water twice a week.

In reporting for the public affairs committee on the matter of the new athletic park, Wm. McLeads said there were still two questions of property within the park limits who were "holdouts," but that negotiations with these two were continuing. Mr. McLeads also reported on the matter of the picture show opening Saturday night, and stated that P. Ubertino, theatre operator, now planned to give Basano a Saturday night show, probably starting early in the new year.

An invitation had been sent Wm. Aberhart of Calgary to deliver a lecture on "The Douglas Plan" in Basano. Date of the lecture has not been set, but it will not be earlier than Dec. 27.

Dr. W. F. Keith, chairman of the entertainment committee, said his committee was making plans for a party and dance Jan. 19.

Audience Impressed By Great War Play

A well filled house greeted "Journey's End," the famous war play presented by Edward Harvey, of Calgary, last Saturday night in the Basano Community Hall.

Written by a young London insurance clerk for Ma rowing club, "Journey's End" emerged as one of the greatest plays of today, and has been seen by packed houses in practically every city on two continents.

The story of the group of officers in a section of the British front lines in France, March 1918, their reactions to the strain of battle, their innermost feelings of disgust with the whole business of war and life in the trenches, sudden death by shell, gas, and machine guns, the nerve-debilitating strain of it all, made a great impression on the Basano audience.

Hugh Walpole, famous novelist, says, "The author—J. M. Barrie. To have given his convictions to the world, with humor and common sense, has been a great feat. A deep emotion without one word of sentimentality, to have hit the war the hardest blow in its swollen stomach that has yet been laid, and this without a word of direct propaganda or raucous against anyone or anything."

Curling Rink Echoes With Roar of Sweep

President's Squad Plays Vice President in Opening Competition—Bongstad Starts After Christmas

Basano curlers got away to a good start Wednesday afternoon this week when the first games of the season were run off. The curling season opened with the president's vice president competition.

Four games were scheduled for Wednesday, but only three were run off. The remaining three games will be played Thursday night.

Yves McLeads curling got away to a big lead when Dr. Scott, playing in the president's team, defeated Bert Stilt 16-4. McLeads tied his game with Vice Pres. H. H. Becker at 10-10, and H. A. Holmes and A. Simpson played another tie game 12-12. Whitehorn, for the president and Geo. E. Bille for the vice pres., did not play Wednesday.

The other two games were: W. L. Finnegan for the president vs. Dr. P. McLeads for the vice pres.; H. P. McDonald for the president vs. E. P. Currie for the vice pres. Twelve and games are being played in this competition, and the aggregate score of the rinks on each team will determine the winner.

Bongstad After Christmas

The day after Christmas, Dec. 26, the club's banquet will start. It will be an open "spiel" and neighboring clubs and local men and ladies who are not members of the club are invited to compete. Curl rinks will be disbanded for thespiel and new rinks formed. The committee is working on plans and will soon have all arrangements made.

To Play for New Cup

Games in the schedule draw will commence after the president's vice president competition, and will continue at the conclusion of the "spiel" schedule games and "on ends."

The Tip Top cup, a silver trophy donated by Tip Top Hardware, will be put up for competition this season, probably after New Year's. The club received this cup a couple of years ago, but it has never been played for.

This competition will be in the form of a knockout, and as competition narrows down the schedule draw will continue.

The two sheets of ice are in good shape. The cold weather makes keen ice possible, and both sheets are running true.

A. G. Bond Honored By Fellow Townsmen

Resident of Basano for 21 Years Moving to Hanna—Has Had Active Career in Board of Trade and Community Work

Arthur G. Bond, resident of Basano for 21 years, was fittingly honored by his fellow townsmen last Wednesday afternoon, when members of the Board of Trade gathered to bid him good-bye and God-speed.

Wm. McLeads gave the farewell address at the conclusion of the board meeting, and presented Mr. Bond with a handsome black leather club bag as a parting gift.

Wm. McLeads briefly sketched the important part played by Mr. Bond in community building in Basano, his activities in the board of trade, his great capacity for work, and his capable and thorough-going manner in which he always tackled and brought to a satisfactory completion anything which he undertook. He was a most valuable member of the community, and it was with deep regret that Basano parted with his services.

Mr. Bond's reply was couched in terms of sincere regret at leaving the town where he had spent 21 years of his life, and his parting with a host of close friends. He commended the board members for the splendid work they had accomplished in making a better and more beautiful Basano, and hoped the good work would continue.

Mr. Bond was accompanied from Toronto, Ont. He was in Seattle, Washington, a short time, coming here from that city in June, 1912, at private secretary to Lord Williams, owner of a large amount of real estate in and around Basano at that time. Later Mr. Bond was associated with Dr. A. G. Scott in the drug store business here.

In May, 1916, he became connected with his appointment to the position of deputy clerk of the court here. To this duty was added, in November, 1920, that of travelling police magistrate, and in May, 1923, a third title, deputy sheriff, was added.

Since last August Mr. Bond has had charge of the court office at Hanna, and on Nov. 30 was officially appointed clerk of the court and sheriff of the Hanna judicial district.

A LITTLE KNOWLEDGE
A well-known statement of Alexander Pope is that "A little knowledge is a dangerous thing." The significance of these words should be borne in mind by those who attempt to understand the workings of the human body. A little knowledge is not dangerous provided it is recognized as being only a little.

We receive letters asking for a diet for acidity, the writer stating that he or she has too much acid in the blood, and wants to avoid foods which make acid. These persons have evidently heard something about acid and alkaline foods, and have possibly read advertisements about the dangers of acidity.

The human body is a delicately balanced machine. The blood never becomes acid. Our correspondents have formed the conclusion that their blood is acid, and they do not know that their bodies require a balanced diet—one which contains both acid and alkali-forming foods. People have read so much about the importance of vitamins that they are tempted to buy special preparations which are sold to them as being rich in vitamins. The truth is that vitamins are important, but they are found in all natural foods. The normal person who eats a wide variety of foods secures all the vitamins he needs.

Everyone should know the importance, not only of vitamins, but of minerals, fats, carbohydrates and proteins in the diet. The student also know that well-balanced meals the year round will take care of all these items in the diet. Particularly we need a wide variety of foods, making sure that milk and milk products, green vegetables, and fresh or dried fruits are used daily.

The most dangerous of all little knowledge is that which brings any person to feel competent to treat disease. The government recognizes that it takes years of preparation before anyone is ready to diagnose disease and prescribe treatment. That is why the laws of our country require that the student of medicine spend several years at a medical school and then pass certain examinations to show his ability to care for the sick before he is licensed to practise medicine.

The public has a right to be informed concerning health matters. Just as the wise man takes out insurance for the protection of his family, so should he take time to inform himself concerning the most valuable asset, his health. Use the little knowledge you possess as a guide, but recognize its limitations. Questions concerning health, addressed to the Canadian Medical Association, 144 College St., Toronto, will be answered personally by letter.

For the satisfactory storage of roots, temperatures in the cellar should be maintained at between 32 and 37 degrees F.

"You should see the graceful lines of her neck and her liquid eyes. Her skin is like velvet and her breath smells like new-mown hay."

"Are you speaking of a girl or a cow?"

Increasing Rainfall Efficiency

A decided increase in the yield of wheat has been obtained in some experiments at the Dominion Experimental Station, Swift Current, Sask., from land where run-off of water was prevented over that from unprotected land. Highly significant data was used in these experiments. Some areas were carefully leveled and were provided with low banks around the edges. Similar areas were marked out, but the natural contour was retained. Run-off water is thus prevented from the leveled areas, but can proceed unhindered from the untreated areas. The whole experiment is arranged as a three year rotation of wheat, wheat, and summerfallow.

A characteristic feature of precipitation on the open plains areas of western Canada is the comparatively heavy showers of short duration. The water from these showers is not absorbed by the soil as rapidly as it is received. On sloping land a considerable proportion finds its way into ditches or small depressions and is lost by seepage and evaporation. On the leveled areas used in the experiment, this loss is prevented.

During the past two seasons at Swift Current the yield of wheat from summerfallow land, treated to prevent run-off, has been 43 per cent greater than that from untreated land, while from similarly treated stubble land the yield has been 31 per cent greater.

It would not be realistic, of course, to duplicate the above experiment on a field scale in western Canada, although traveling as it is termed, is practised in some sections of Texas. However, by the simple expedient of using narrow, suitably placed to prevent the movement of water which would otherwise be lost by run-off, the water retained by summerfallow can be increased.

In the case of spring run-off of snow water the method can be modified to divert this water on to small areas of alfalfa. Possibilities in this direction have already been demonstrated by the superintendent of the Dominion Experimental Station, Beaverlodge, Alta. Several farmers in northern Montana are now using similar cheap irrigation schemes and are thereby augmenting their supplies of much needed forage.

The pedestrian was walking slowly down Fifth Avenue, at Forty-Fifth Street. The clock in a window showed it was just 5 a.m.
"Out rather late, aren't you?" suggested a policeman, as he eyed the man rather suspiciously.
"Perhaps so," was the response, "but this is the only chance a pedestrian has nowadays."

FINAL INSTALLMENT

"Go on some like I told you," "Oh, forest it," she sniggered. "I'm not going, and that settles it. If you want to get rid of me, you had better up and find out cattle."

"If it wasn't for you, mother, I wouldn't take my hand out of my pocket," she blurted. "Well, nobody asked you to!" Nellie heaved. "You can suit yourself, you know."

"Shosh ain't to Miss Murray," the kid grunted assured her, and looked down the canyon without once looking back.

He looked back up the canyon and roared into the willows. At the same time the kid turned and rode toward the dry creek bed where the ground was rough and lumpy, gouged with spring frosts and undermined by burrowing animal. When he found a spot where the fence went up over a small ridge he dismounted and kicked the saddle in for a moment or three or four paces, forced them to the ground and anchored them there with a couple of rocks and led his horse down.

He kept going straight ahead until the willow growth ceased on higher ground and he could see what sort of place it was that had been of a fence like that.

Some one was running cattle here, all right. The edge of the "thicket" was broken and tumbled, where stock had pushed in for shelter, and there was cattle signs everywhere.

The kid's nerves began to tingle a little. Cattle herding! Shosh would be funny if he was to run better on her bunch of cattle. Be right if he let her come along, he reckoned. And when his spirits rose a little at the perfectly logical reason he had just discovered for wanting her with him.

The kid lifted his hat and swept the rain waves of hair back off his forehead, settled a bull's head scoured but at a careless tilt, pulled his holstered gun into position on his thigh and rode forward with an eager gleam in his eyes.

From the pole corral set back in a thin grove of cottonwood and "bush" alder, a grey dusty cloud arose into the hot sunbaked room. Within the corral fence a small herd of cattle fringed uneasily round and round, swerving and clucking aside when a cowboy's foot awaked out like the vicious flat head of a striking rattler.

A man on guard outside unhooked the chain and swung open the gate to let out a rider dragging a husky bull calf over toward the branding fire, where two calf wranglers grabbed and threw him on his side with a thump.

A man lifted a branding iron deliberately out of the blaze, looked at it, waved it to and fro in the air, looked at it again and decided that it was about the right heat, and walked over to the calf lying there, with two sweating cowboys braced on either side of him.

Shosh looked at it again and decided that it was about the right heat, and walked over to the calf lying there, with two sweating cowboys braced on either side of him.

"Well, I'm damned!" jarred from the sleeked mouth of the man with the branding iron, Joe Hale, range forner from the Poole.

"Ridin' for Missus Murray, down in the valley. Widow woman. Old man that was killed and put the corral on the right the time they shot Babe, that was her husband."

"The one Babe got the bounty on," Eyes turned sideways to meet other guarded glances. Babe's shoulder jerked back as if from a blow on the chest, but no one spoke.

"Lost some cattle last night," the kid continued, in his purring drawl, "I come out at that time."

The atmosphere of the Poole men froze for a second. Only Babe, knowing the kid of old, went for his gun and dropped it as the kid's pitiless bullet went crashing thru the tangles of his hand. The change of the kid made away from there. Joe Hale knew better than to try a shot. He remembered too vividly how Jesse Harker had fared with the kid over at the Poole.

Babe remembered, too, and a horror grew in his face as he stared at his named and bleeding hand. He'd rather be dead than crippled, he always had said so—and now his knuckles would be stiff and useless to pull a trigger. But when he glanced up and saw the kid looking after the fleeing horseman he changed a shot with his left gun. But the kid didn't seem to need his eyes to tell what was going on. He caught Babe's movement and fired almost without looking.

"Line up with your back to this way," the kid said softly to Joe and the who calf wranglers.

They did so in haste—all but Babe who had crumpled down limply in the face was streaked with dust and what looked suspiciously like tears, and her hair had been clawed by the willows until it lay on her shoulders like a streak of sunshine. She sat on her knees, hunched and watched the kid, and under the direct gaze he felt his ears and his face burn like fire. The kid did not look up, but he knew the exact instant when she turned her head to look at the newly branded calf which now wore a blackened and smattering window-etch brand. She yesterday had been in a tan-colored Revere. He reined her horse over and the corral and stood in the stirrups look over the fence and inspect the milking herd.

"Well, they're all here, I guess," he remarked to the kid, who was standing away, was kneeling beside the calf wrestler and was yanking the last knot tight. "You made quite a haul, didn't you, Bob?"

"I said he better," the kid owned, with a covert glance from under his hat. "One got plumb away."

Well, I told you we ought to work together. He was keen on trying to pick a fight with me, you know. Looks like you got all your ideas of fighting here."

"Hecked around at the stiller, apples, I hope you're ready to admit now that the Poole outfit are a bunch of cow thieves."

"Shosh am," said the kid, his lips ready to smile the instant he forgot himself and let them go.

"What you going to do now?" "Reckon I'll go after my horse."

She followed him, riding in silence while the kid went mincing along on his high heels, his spurs gouging up the loose soil at every step.

"I know that, I just want to say that I never did class you with the Poole. It's just this ordinary temper of mine."

"Shucks! I never did think a word about it," the kid declared earnestly, looking her straight in the eyes.

"Well, I just want you to know I'm sorry."

"You'll need to be," "I am, just the same. You ought to know I never did class you with the Poole. It's just this ordinary temper of mine."

"Shucks! If you'll call that a tangle, you'll ought to see mine!" The kid gathered up the reins and mounted and swung alongside her.

"You? Why, Bob Revere? You know very well I'm the meanest thing on earth! After all you've done, to—to do what I did and—let the way I've talked to you. It makes me so ashamed—"

"Aw, hush! When you'll talk that a-way, you make me feel like hitting my head against a rock! You'll don't know how I felt this last month, thinking I had nothing but hate from you!"

"Hail!" cried Nellie Murray, as one who stands ahead before so crimson floor rushed up to the hand of yellow hair on her temples.

The kid reached out and gathered Nellie Murray into his arms. The kid sat on the ground with his back against a tree and drew his mouth across his smiling face while he tapped time with his foot. The kid played "The Mocking Bird" over and over again with his prisoners sat and listened and wondered what kind of a man was Tiger Eye Revere, who could shoot a man in cold blood, capture others who had begged they were able to take care of themselves, and then sit all the afternoon playing that darning mouth organ like he hadn't a care in the world.

The kid didn't know or care what they thought about him. The kid was living in his world of his own, where a girl with yellow hair loved him enough to marry him and settle down. Gone into Badger now after help and the sheriff, to come and take this bunch with the evidence of the cattle right there behind them in the corral. Gons to bring a doctor out to fix up Babe's hands. But she'd be back, all right. And when she got here, the kid would take her over to the ranch and they'd tell her mother there was going to be a man in the family that sheah would be right on the job.

He played "Listen to the Mocking Bird" with more warbles and trills and low happy notes than he ever dreamed of putting into the song. The rather bare and desolate ranch where Nellie lived he made a paradise in his dreams. Honeycuckles sang to him to his mother and harper get him a pair of mockingbirds. Take her and her mother back down to Texas, only pay's all enemies would want to go on and the feed and he'd have to kill some body. Reckon the killing was about over, up here.

The afternoon waned and the Poole men began to swear at the child and camp in their limbo, but the kid never heard them, he was busy making plans for the future. Darker came. He at there very still, trying to realize the amazing truth that this little Murray was going to marry him. She loved him. She said she did.

He was still sitting there, two hours later, when Nellie came with the doctor and the sheriff and half

THE END PERFECT MAPLE LEAF

The most beautiful maple leaf, prize winner in the national competition conducted by the Canadian Pacific Railway, was submitted by Mrs. C. McDonald, Fredericton, N. B., York County, New Brunswick. It has a flare of autumn coloring ranging from light yellow to deep blood red, and its perfect symmetry and form won it distinction in competition with 10,000 other beautiful leaves, submitted by enthusiastic Canadians from Coast to Coast.

The leaf, a thing of sheer beauty, was selected by such outstanding artists as C. W. Simpson, R.C.A., E. W. Pilot, R.C.A., and James Crockett.

In the present leaf phase of the competition, six-year-old Bobby Howe, of Revelstoke, B.C., made an astonishing win with a leaf showing an area of 22 square inches.

The success which greeted the original competition this year has encouraged Canadian Pacific officials to plan for another competition on a larger and more comprehensive scale next fall.

"Howdy, Joe," said the kid, and felt for a match. He nodded to the calf wranglers, who were on their feet and mopping their perspiring faces with moist handkerchiefs. As the man at the gate came toward him, the kid's eyes were changed curiously to the steady stare of a tiger.

Babe glanced at him, with hollowed eyes and a sallow, indolent tone to his swarthy face. Babe, with a question in his cold grey eyes and a smile on his face.

"Hell's brass buttons!" cried Babe, swearing his very choicest oath kept for special occasions. "Where the hell did you drop in from, Tiger Eye?"

THE PICTURES

The widely heralded "Pilgrimage" new romantic drama from Fox Film, is the feature booked for the Orpheum Theatre Friday night of this week, Dec. 15. It is an adaptation of the popular story of the same name by Ida A. B. Wylie.

Dealing with the innermost emotions of a mother who cannot see her son taken from her by the woman he loves, the story has been reported as one of the most powerful of recent screen dramas. It details the reactions of a devoted woman to the romance of her own son, and the romance of the two strangers whose lives are on the verge of ruin through just selfishness as she herself showed. She has sent her son to his death. But she has her error in the error of another woman who is about to do the same pitiful service for her own son.

The locale of the film goes from the backwoods community of Arkansas to the cosmopolitan atmosphere of New York and Paris. The picture reveals some of the most elaborate settings ever achieved for a motion picture.

The featured roles are portrayed by Henrietta Crosman, veteran of the stage and screen; Heather Angel, newcomer to American films; Norman Foster and Marian Nixon.

"Pilgrimage" showed at the Capitol Theatre, Calgary, this week. Lional Barrymore and Miriam Hopkins star in "The Stranger's Return" coming to the Orpheum on Friday or next week, Dec. 22. A story of real people, human, simple, like the soil they spring from.

At 12 o'clock midnight Christmas Eve there will be a preview of Laurel and Hardy in "Pack Up Your Troubles."

The weekly meeting of the C.O.F. T. Good Companions was held on Dec. 7 at 7:30 p.m. in the basement of Knox Church.

Next week the club commences a study on Indian temperatures.

For centuries people have known that blunt noses make the best streamlines. Note the nose of the shark, which is the most perfect example of a blunt nose which will cut down the "drag."

For centuries people have known that blunt noses make the best streamlines. Note the nose of the shark, which is the most perfect example of a blunt nose which will cut down the "drag."

A son was born to Mr. and Mrs. Floyd Collins, of Glen, on Dec. 13 at the local hospital.

A. O. Bond returned from Hanna last Tuesday and will remain in Bassano for a few days before going back to his new duties in Hanna.

Mr. and Mrs. A. G. Hamar and family have moved to a farm about eight miles north of Glendeg.

Robt. Broadfoot has moved into the Hamar house.

The post office will not close as usual next Wednesday afternoon, but will remain open all day.

The juvenile hockey club will drive and dance in the Masonic Community Hall Friday night; this week promises to be a splendid affair and the boys are hoping for good support from everybody.

Local stores will be open all day next week including Wednesday, and will also be open Friday and Saturday nights. Monday and Tuesday, Dec. 18 and 19, the stores will be closed.

Santa Clause Coming To Knox S. S. Concert

Knox Church Sunday school annual Christmas concert will be held in the church Thursday evening next week, Dec. 21. The program starts at 8:30 p.m. sharp.

The boys and girls are practicing faithfully for this concert, and they have a splendid program of songs, drills, skits, and recitations.

This annual affair never fails to draw a capacity crowd, and those who want a seat find it necessary to go early.

Santa Claus will be there, of course. He will have good sleighing for his Christmas trip, and tons of reindeer if the cold weather continues, for there is just enough snow on the ground to make sleigh travel good. Good old Santa will make his appearance after the concert program, and boys and girls are assured a treat when he arrives.

An admission price of 25 cents will be charged adults; children are admitted free.
